The Officer who commanded the troops on the occasion reports: 'About an hour later in the day, Dr. Douglas, 2nd Battalion 24th Regiment, and the four privates referred to, gallantly manning the second gig, made their way through the surf almost to the shore, but finding their boat was half-filled with water, they retired. A second attempt made by Dr. Douglas and party proved successful, five of us being safely passed through the surf to the boats outside. A third and last trip got the whole of the party left on shore safe to the boats.' It is stated that Dr. Douglas accomplished these trips through the surf to the shore by no ordinary exertion. He stood in the bows of the boat, and worked her in an intrepid and seamanlike manner, cool to a degree, as if what he was then doing was an ordinary act of everyday life. The four privates behaved in an equally cool and collected manner, rowing through the roughest surf when the slightest hesitation or want of pluck on the part of any one of them would have been attended by the gravest results. It is reported that seventeen officers and men were thus saved from what must otherwise have been a fearful risk, if not certainty of death." THE POCKET DARK ROOM

A beautifully finished device which is small enough to be carried in the pocket, with which anyone can develop films or plates in daylight or any light anywhere.

No need of any experience of developing. No more groping about in the dark. No ruby lamp, developing dishes, or glass measures. The Pocket Dark Room takes one ounce only of developer, which is prepared by the simple addition of water to our special developing powders. A rubber bulb is supplied with the apparatus for the purpose of applying the developer. Every exposure is developed separately under observation and the fullest possible control.
